Innovations

[1] Prototyping Information Models for Local Governance (IDRC) (2014)

The project engages with the information and process models underlying most modern systems of governance. It suggests mechanisms for local governance whereby the traditionally "governed" category may be more involved in governance. Some of the questions relevant to the project are: Who or what are the main constituents of the two categories of "governing" and "governed"? What are the areas and objects of concern? What is the relationship between them? What is considered relevant information and by whom? Who has access to what information? And by what institutional or organizational mechanism?

Funded by the IDRC, and being executed at the Centre for Culture, Media & Governance, Jamia Millia Islamia, the project is a part of the effort to 'explore policies and practices' for building research capacity combining science and technology and the social sciences.

[2] Media Diversity Index (2013)

Center for Culture, Media and Governance: Jamia Millia Islamia

Media Diversity Index<sup>[[SEP]]</sup> (Working Prototype 2.0)<sup>[[SEP]]</sup> Introduction: Context for a Media Diversity Index in India. Media Diversity has been a recurrent theme in debates on media policy since 1947.<sup>[[SEP]]</sup> The current media landscape in India is fragmented, varied and regionalized. It has dominant, powerful and expansive media owners and a weak regulatory environment.<sup>[[SEP]]</sup> The idea is to explore the media as a marker of Democracy

Conceptual Framework for a Media Diversity Index - The model is based on 8 Domains of media diversity which were identified after sifting through debates in various media policy documents, both Indian and global. In order to assess the diversity in Indian news media, the entire universe of news media has divided into 8 domains or major thematic areas. These thematic areas are developed as such, that it can capture the ground realities of Indian news media to gauge the diversity.

**These 8 domains are ****

Ownership - Structure, Concentration & Accumulation

Market & Revenue Share Domination

Institutionalized Political Patronage

Access to Media Products/Services/Infrastructure

Freedom of Speech and Expression

Diversity of & within the Public Service Broadcaster

Geographical Centralization

Variety of Media Types and Genres

Within each domain, various Risk Factors to media diversity have been identified. These risks would include increased corporate ownership to measure risk of ownership concentration in various media segments, regulatory framework to ensure freedom of speech, supervision of the media and regulatory framework to ensure freedom of speech, supervision of the media. These risk factors are assessed, measured and operationalized through a set of Indicators of media diversity. These indicators are objective and quantifiable measures to assess the risk. There can be a possibility of more than one indicator or a set of indicator attached to a gauge a particular risk factor.

Sample for Developing our Methodology

To develop a Media Diversity Index; 12 states were selected. South India: Kerala, Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka; West India: Maharashtra, Gujarat; North India: Jammu & Kashmir, Punjab, Uttar Pradesh; East India: West Bengal, Orissa, Assam. They were chosen to ensure that at this preliminary stage we engage with media landscapes that are clearly defined and differentiated by linguistic territories/markets
