45. List the teaching methods adopted by the faculty for different programmes.
- Students inclusion in ongoing projects: Students are involved in the ongoing research projects relevant to paper. The students analyse the data, reflect upon it and write a term paper.
 - Field work- Students undertake fieldwork in ongoing research on mapping media in the neighbourhood of JMI.
 - Library Exercise - Students undertake studies on media firms, investment, diversification and do library exercises to write their term papers.
 - Seminar Presentation– Students make presentations of their projects in classroom seminars.
 - Workshop- The students present their findings from the research project in workshop which are evaluated by a select number of faculty.

46. How does the department ensure that programme objectives are constantly met and learning outcomes are monitored?

The Centre annually reviews the academic programme such as curriculum innovations, syllabus and teaching pedagogy. The students’ inputs are incorporated.

47. Highlight the participation of students and faculty in extension activities.
- Full participation by students and faculty in all extension activities in item no 30 and 44, i.e. extension lectures and workshops and Video Conferences.

48. Give details of “beyond syllabus scholarly activities” of the Department.
- Besides, classroom teaching, it is mandatory for the students to attend the ongoing following activities at the Centre:

- Public lectures
- Policy dialogues
- Students workshop
- Summer Projects/Internship
- Extension lectures
- Film screenings

49. State whether the programme/ Department is accredited/ graded by other agencies?
If yes, give details.

50. Briefly highlight the contributions of the Department in generating new knowledge, basic or applied.

- Mapping the field of Media Governance in India.
- Mapping the field of Communication Studies in India
- Media Diversity Index
- Innovations in Local Governance

51. Detail five major Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Challenges (SWOC) of the Department

STRENGTH:

- Introduced interdisciplinary post-graduate programme on Media Governance, the first of its kind in South Asia and in the World.
- Bagged research projects from major International Bodies and Government of India (amount is 4.08crorefrom all project between 2008-09 to 2011-14)
- Excelled in pedagogy and curricular innovation in introducing courses in various central universities, state universities in India.
- Attracted foreign academia for association with Centre in teaching, collaborative research and showcasing Centre's activities at the global level by co-hosting and promoting Indian Communication Studies.
- The Centre has signed 10MoUs with Universities and civil society institutions both in India and abroad.
- Digital Empowerment Foundation, New Delhi
- Alternative Law Forum, Bangalore
- University of Zurich, Zurich, Switzerland
- York University, Toronto, Canada
- University Libre De Brussels, Brussels, Belgium
- Ryerson University, Toronto, Canada
- University of Toronto, Canada
- Katholik University, Leuven, Belgium
- Istanbul University, Istanbul, Turkey
- Kadir Has University, Turkey

WEAKNESSES:

- The Centre needs to develop a Media Monitoring Lab to monitor the visuals to undertake research on Media Pluralism and Media Diversity in India. The present source of procurement of Visual data and analysis is cumbersome and time consuming and costly affair
- The Centre needs to develop a multi-media lab to have a regular interactions with various stake holders to evolve suitable models of governance and problems solving mechanism for effective governance in society.
- The Centre needs to develop a good library with access to more academic journals on communication and governance issues.
- The Centre needs more working hands, both technical and academic, to engage with its ongoing activities
- The Centre needs sufficient funds to publish & disseminate its Project Report, Working Papers and Seminar proceedings.

OPPORTUNITIES:

- The idea and imagination of the Centre has attracted scholars and professional of media to introspect on the practices and governance in the field. We can tap on this pool of knowledge and make the students and curricula benefit from it.

- The Centre has submitted under CPEPA scheme a proposal to UGC so as to carry forward the proposed and ongoing activities at the centre.
- Our students have tremendous opportunities of working in their capacity as media experts in various policy groups, research bodies as also in the corporate sector, international agencies and civil society organizations.
- The Centre realizes the potential as well as the need to develop materials in order to meet challenges in teachings, research and policy-oriented issues on theory, history and methods in communication studies and research.
- The Centre is approached by Civil Society group and Donors to train students & mid-career professionals in the skill of media advocacy and democracy.

CHALLENGES:

- One of the biggest challenges ahead for the Centre is to provide a pathway for developing curriculum and pedagogy on Media Education for the country.
- Strengthening young faculty members through refresher courses on the one hand and to update the faculty and students about recent developments in the field and knowledge about media governance in the country.
- Developing and sustaining networks among young researchers and faculty across media scholars in India through various activities such as summer programmes, conferences and workshops
- Consolidate and develop collaborative research among various universities in India to generate empirical data and encourage research traditions in the field
- Initiate a peer-review journal on Communication Studies for dissemination of findings as well as developing a culture for research and writing.

52. Future plans of the Department.

One of the major challenges for the Centre is to address the inter-disciplinarity in Communication Studies. Besides, the discipline of Communication exists and taught in Indian Universities are not able to address the rising concern and challenges posed by policy, civil society and Industry requirements. The changes in technology demands new courses such as print, electronic and online media. Such courses are oriented towards professional requirements rather than studies orientation. Due to lack of studies orientation, the field of Communication witnesses a knowledge deficit and unable to address the disciplinary concern and develop a body of knowledge like other disciplines. Fragmentation of the field along medium has further affected the field for any intellectual engagement. The centre's primary thrust is to work towards interdisciplinary of Communication and develop a knowledge base for future engagement.

From Medium to Media: The Locus Reshaped

Central to our approach is a research orientation that should not confine itself to any medium of communication per se; rather, it must reflect upon the historical and cultural nature of the media. In doing so, it must combine the study of both, the material organization of the media---i.e. goods which human uses---and the institutional organization structuring it. In other words, the renewed emphasis must engage with three spheres of the 'medium', where question of how culture, technologies and the social interact find a locus. This is indeed a major challenge as it involves the fuzzy zone of interactions between technology and culture, or the interferences between technologies of memorizing, transmission, and displacement, on the one hand, and our modes of belief, thought, and organization, on the other.

From Culture to Media-Culture: The Contiguous Arena

We must investigate, firstly, how a break in theories of transmission and transportation provoke a change in human behavior; and secondly, how a cultural tradition provokes, assimilates or modifies a technical innovation in its existing media-culture. Here, the function of media, namely transmission, must be considered in relation between media and history, human life and social circumstance.

From Administration to Media Governance: The Structuring Arena

The media occupy a space that is constantly contested--- viz. to organizational and technological restructuring, to economic and cultural constraints, to commercial pressures and to changing professional practices. As conveyers and purveyors of ideas, a media system is often called the 'oxygen' of democracy, one of the fundamental freedoms and enablers of participation in society.

Nevertheless, the relation of the media with governance is not only functional but also transactional---an encoding of the dynamic shatter zone between society (governed) and polity (governor). And at this level, the 'mass' media--- as also other institutions of communication--- help sustain human relationships, revealing the mutuality of interests.

Much current issues in media, culture and governance may be collapsed into a core set of questions, their answers may not be readily forthcoming. For, some relate to economic issues, others to human rights. Other issues are stable, with no serious debate or contention, but such a stability not being either at ease or indefinite. Still others are emerging for the first time, such as media advocacy. Engaging with these invariably necessitates the response of multiple agencies working in partnership, including when required, across national mediascapes. In turn, this calls for not only reorienting research, skill-building endeavors and media institutions but also managing deliberative processes about the estimated 'public value' of innovations in media education and governance.

Making an overall assessment of the media environment, one can say that compared to the earlier times of scarcity, media environment is today characterized by information abundance and multiplicity of sectors and platforms. Curiously, Media Education in India also mirrors such a sectoral development of media industry. The growing industry requires an array of skilled professionals spanning both news and entertainment, from technical, creative, business to managerial. This has pushed the need for more specialized, practice oriented media related courses. Media Studies has thus become a capsule of various 'mediums' of the media - journalism, cinema, broadcasting etc - each demanding separate curriculum based on skills specific to the medium. Its emphasis on teaching has become a function of the dynamics of demand and supply in the media industry. As a result, the idea and imagination of communication studies and communication research has itself become fragmented and medium bound.

This necessitates a critical interrogation of the existing media practice and the canvas of Media education in India therefore needs to spread wide. In this regard, media scholarship needs to engage both theoretically and empirically with the dynamic processes and practices of media policy, advocacy and governance.

Any discipline features a corpus of theory, accepted ways of knowing and accumulated knowledge and in this respect communications' emergence as an academic discipline in India is a work in progress. What is needed perhaps is a serious reflection and a thought out direction, to gather both coherence and legitimacy.

5 Year Roadmap of the Centre

The Centre has proposed to University Grants Commission to undertake:

Strengthening Communication Studies Pedagogy

- Identifying Mechanisms of Enhancing Teaching Tools & Techniques through Curriculum Development and Teaching Workshops.

Strengthening Communication Research

- Analysis & identification of institutions of higher education requiring strengthening of research capabilities and of pedagogical innovations.
- Identifying & analyzing research themes & areas for future engagement. Prioritizing themes of basic/policy research addressing the emergent media milieu.
- Laying priority on Communication Research through an expansion of university funding.

Strengthening Collaborations:

- Launching Journal/s on Communication Studies in India.
- Making an Association that facilitates exchange between scholars, as also publishes a newsletter, Journal and Website for book reviews. This can be modeled on the ICA/IAMCR.
- Exploring Institutional Collaborations both at a National and International level.
- Organizing Video Conferences between University Departments on communication both within India and abroad.

Forging an inter-university Network that involves:

- Identifying opportunities for capacity-building for the Faculty and doctoral students through thematic workshops.
- Organizing Forums and Workshops to engage in methodological challenges and conceptual issues.
- Organizing Summer/Winter School for Communication Research Scholars.
- Facilitating arrangements for Visiting Faculty from National and International Institutions.
